

RUSSIA AND JAPAN HAVE NOT YET AGREED

Conflicting Stories Regarding The Outlook for Peace.

Report of Agreement Between the Countries by Which Czar Will Uphold Rights in Manchuria And the Mikado Will do the Same in Korea.

London, Dec. 2.—Baron Hayashi, Japanese minister in London, denies the report that the basis for a treaty between Japan and Russia has been agreed upon. He says negotiations to this end are still proceeding between the two countries, but that matters have been somewhat delayed by the growing irritation of the Japanese against the Russians at Dalny, the new city near Port Arthur.

WAR CLOUD NOT DISPELLED.

London, Dec. 2.—According to the London correspondents in the leading provincial newspapers the war cloud which has been hanging over the far east for several months past has not been dispelled as some people might be led to believe from the tone of recent dispatches from that quarter of the globe. The correspondents unanimously assert that official London now regards the far eastern situation far more serious than at any time since the dispute arose between Japan and Russia over the evacuation of Manchuria by Russia. The London correspondent of the Manchester Dispatch in a dispatch published in that newspaper today says: "I think I am perfectly justified in stating that not only our own government but also the American government have given up all hope of a peaceable issue of the far eastern situation."

STORY That Russia and Japan Had Agreed on Basis of Settlement.

Paris, Dec. 2.—The Associated Press learns that Japan and Russia are on the verge of a settlement of the far eastern controversy, which promises to dissipate the war cloud that has been hanging over both countries. The two nations have practically agreed upon the basis of a treaty through negotiations in which France and Britain exerted their good offices.

Russia will accept the two agreements entered into by Japan and Korea, dated 1896 and 1898, respectively, under which Japan secured various rights in Korea, including the maintenance of a garrison at Seoul. In exchange for this concession Japan will accept Russia's treaty with China respecting Manchuria.

It is believed that Japan and Russia will reiterate their support of the principles of the "open door" and the integrity of China and of Korea.

In diplomatic and official circles here considerable gratification is expressed at the satisfactory stage upon which the negotiations between Russia and Japan have now entered.

Before the recent visit of Count Lamsdorff, the Russian foreign minister to Paris, on which occasion he accompanied the Czar, France and Great Britain, as a result of the entente existing between them had agreed to use their influence with Russia and Japan respectively for the purpose of securing an amicable agreement of the questions in dispute. When Count Lamsdorff arrived M. Delcasse, the French foreign minister, took occasion to point out the interest which France had in a peaceful solution of the difficulty. At the same time M. Delcasse told Count Lamsdorff that it was clearly understood that no matter what the result there would be no change, generally speaking, in the attitude of France toward Russia.

Count Lamsdorff fully appreciated the delicacy of the French representative, but explained that the policy of the Russian government tended to a peaceful solution. In the meantime Great Britain had been making energetic representations to the Tokyo government. Diplomats therefore give considerable credit to the respective allies of the two disputants for the moderation which has prevailed in the Russian and Japanese Councils.

Information has been received here to the effect that Japan is constructing at Seoul barracks for 1000 men, though she now maintains only 500 in the Korean capital. This as accepted as an indication that Japan contemplates the strengthening of her garrison at Seoul. The Emperor of Korea is very much agitated over the situation in his country, and is denying himself to all foreigners, evidently fearing that the Russian and Japanese representatives at Seoul will ask for an audience and present fresh demands. This attitude of the Emperor was illustrated when the Admiral of the French squadron, which put in at Chemulpo, proceeded to Seoul, where the French minister asked an audience for the naval representative. The Emperor declined to grant this request.

PLOT TO KILL

The Premier of Japan Nipped in the Bud at Yokohama.

Yokohama, Dec. 2.—A Japanese medical student was arrested on suspicion of an attempt to assassinate the Marquis Ito. He carried a dagger concealed under his kimono when arrested at the villa of the Marquis at Misco. It is believed that this attempt on the life of the statesman was the outcome of recent suggestions in the sensational newspapers of Japan that a ministerial assassination would be a patriotic action tended to produce a more warlike policy on the part of the government.

A mass meeting of the metropolitan section of the Selyuk party at Tokio passed a resolution denouncing the delay in the negotiations with Russia and urging their speedy prosecution. The Selyuk party, formed by the Marquis Ito in 1900, has a clear majority in the Diet over all other parties.

DYING

From Complication of Consumption,
Pneumonia and Typhoid After Hypnotic Trance.

New Orleans, Dec. 2.—After being buried underground in a hypnotic trance for six days, Mamie Lamar Rogers is dying from a complication of consumption, pneumonia and typhoid. When she had been interred for two days the coffin was dug up and found to be half full of water. She was again buried and seemed to survive the ordeal without harm. During the six weeks which have since elapsed she has, however, developed a serious illness. She has suits pending against her colleagues, whom she accuses of trying to beat her out of her promised reward. She claims to live in Peoria, Ill., and to be a native of France.

Facts Kept Back Which Democrats in Congress Will Try to Secure
—Baldwin's Denial

Washington, Dec. 2.—In connection with the numerous denials called forth by the publication of the brief of General Bristow's report, officials of the postoffice department mention the fact that much of the evidence on which the fourth assistant bases his charges, has been withheld from the public.

The full report from which the 15,000 word abstract was prepared, contains 110,000 words. The entire report may not be published for months.

The efforts of the Democrats in Congress to draw out this evidence by means of a congressional investigation will be opposed by the Republicans, who claim it will interfere with the prosecution.

Senator Carmack will lead the Democratic effort to secure a congressional investigation.

JUDGE BALDWIN'S DENIAL.

Canton, O., Dec. 2.—Judge Baldwin, McKinley's personal friend, mentioned in Bristow's report, makes an emphatic denial. In brief he said:

"Mr. Bristow, concluding his reference to me, says: 'There is reason to believe that Judge George E. Baldwin knows as much about this fraud as any other party, not even excepting Beavers and Driggs.'"

"I desire to say that that statement is absolutely false in every particular. I knew of no fraud being perpetrated, attempted or contemplated."

In closing Judge Baldwin states that all charges implicating his son, Ernest Baldwin, assistant United States district attorney for the Southern district of New York in the Brandt-Dent transactions with the postal department are without foundation.

SERVIA'S WAR BUDGET.

Belgrade, Dec. 2.—It was ascertained today that the budget which will be submitted by the minister to war, Col. Andrejevitch, will be a heavy one. He will ask parliament for a grant of ten million francs for the purchase of armaments of which nine million francs will be to purchase quick firing field guns of the most modern pattern and ammunition.

DARING HOLDUP

In a Chicago Gambling Resort—Pair
Magazine Revolvers Made Fifteen Men Ante.

Chicago, Dec. 2.—With the belief that magazine revolvers win more than half the battle, a lone highwayman stroled into the Vanderbilt club at 171 State street last night, made fifteen men put their hands aloft, and succeeded in making away with more than $200 in money. At the time of the robbery there were three poker games and a crap game in progress. At the time when there appeared to be the greatest money on the tables the robber called out for all of them to throw up their hands. When the players looked up they were confronted with two magazine revolvers, and the footpad demanded that the money in their possession be turned over to him. Still holding the revolvers, he signaled to the men that the money be placed in his possession, and after the man in the place had made his "donation" the robber backed to the door, said "good night," and departed.

FATAL COLLISION

On Chicago Elevated Road—Several Injured and Panic Caused Women to Faint.

Chicago, Dec. 2.—A dense fog, this morning was responsible for numerous accidents, the most serious being a rear-end collision between two trains on the South Side elevated. Harry Cappell, a motorman, was probably fatally injured and Charles Newton, a passenger, was badly bruised and cut. Several others suffered minor injuries.

The crash caused a panic among the several hundred of passengers. In the wild rush for the doors that followed, several women fainted, men fought each other and climbed over seats to the windows, seeking to escape. All of the cars were derailed, blocking the track for over an hour. Thousands of passengers were compelled to walk half a dozen blocks or more to reach a surface line to get down and to the southern part of the city.

STUDENTS BURNED

In University Fire at Ottawa, Canada.
150 Students Have Narrow Escapes From Death.

Ottawa, Ont., Dec. 2.—(Bulletin)—It is reported that half a dozen students were severely burned in a fire which destroyed Ottawa university this morning. The fire was a fierce one and many of the 150 students had narrow escapes from death. The majority of those in attendance at the college are from the United States.

Buffalo, Dec. 2.—The University of Ottawa was considerably damaged by fire this morning, and one priest was burned severely. The blaze was confined to the main building. Details are lacking.

CROWD

Wanted to Lynch Desperado in Pennsylvania Who Tortured Woman and Committed Robbery.

Carbondale, Pa., Dec. 2.—John Cobosky has been arrested as one of a gang of desperados which has been committing crimes in the vicinity for several weeks. The gang broke into the home of Anthony Covinski, near Vandling. Covinski was beaten into unconsciousness with a mine block. His wife was then commanded to make known the whereabouts of the valuables and money. This she refused to do.

The desperados gagged her and then held a lamp beneath the soles of her feet. Still she refused to speak and burning coals were dropped into the palms of her hands and needles were thrust into her flesh. Almost overcome with pain she disclosed the hiding place of $550, the savings of a lifetime, and the burglars made off with it.

Detective Moran, who captured Cobosky, summoned assistance to keep him from the infuriated crowd.

FOUR BUTLER CHILDREN WEIGH OVER 1000 POUNDS

Butler, O., Dec. 2.—Four children of Mr. and Mrs. Abram Deck, residing southeast of here, have broken all records for weight, the four tipping the beam at 1,060 pounds. John weighs 320, Dora 40, William 260 and Katie 240. The parents are small, both not weighing more than 250 pounds.

Miss McKinley Better.

Owensboro, Ky., Dec. 2.—Last night for the first time since Saturday an improvement is noted in the case of Miss Mable McKinley, who is ill here with nervous prostration. It is thought that she will be able to leave her room within a week.

Paris has no less than 1,215 classes of workmen. There are for instance, 586 classes engaged in the chemical trade and 370 in metal industries.

THE CHILD'S NAME IS CANTON OHIO

Canton, O., Dec. 2.—This is known as a live little city. Now there is a live Canton Ohio. The boy, not yet two years old, bears the name by legal right and at the long request of his mother.

Canton's grandmother Mrs. C. Yochim of Rock Island, Ill., writes to Mayor Smith that she is about to remove to Canton and bring the city's namesake with her in the hope that he will grow up an honor to it.

There is a sad romance in the boy's birth and his nomenclature. His mother was Miss Harriet Helen Yochim, whose stage name was Helen Mucroy. While playing in "The Hustler" she fell in love with a member of the company, Mack M. Carnes, and they were married in Canton's Grand Opera House after a performance on November 1, 1899.

who was only 23 years old, was attacked with tuberculosis. Knowing her death was imminent, last April she told her mother that the two happiest days of her life were that of her marriage and that when her son came to bless her. Her last wish was that her child should drop the name of Carnes and bear that of Canton Ohio. Her mother promised that she should be so named by due process of law, and she kept her promise.

So Canton, Ohio, McKinley's home, now lives in the flesh.

REASONS

Given for Exceptionally Cold Weather
So Early in the Season by Old People.

Upper Sandusky, O., Dec. 2.—Old inhabitants in Wyandot county have predicted a long and severe winter, since the recent heavy fall of snow, which has not been so early in many years. They give as reasons that squirrels have completely denuded the forest of nuts, turkeys have overcast-bones of double strength, evergreen trees have a much heavier foliage than usual, turtles and snakes have hibernated at twice their usual depth, rabbits have extra heavy front teeth, combs have three coats of hair, while shingles on houses have grown a coat of hair or fuzz.

These are said to be unfailing signs of the coming of winter and the old people advise all to prepare for it.

MIX UP

IN THE SCANDALS OF THE POST-OFFICE DEPARTMENT.

Louis Kemper, Former Supt. of Registry System, Retaliates with Charges Against Bristow.

Washington, Dec. 2.—Louis Kemper, former superintendent of the registry system in the postoffice department, who is accused in Bristow investigation report of having received cigars from Cuba by mail without paying duty, has issued a statement that while the allegations are true, he readily informed the inspectors of all the circumstances and is certain that no law is violated. He asserts that his conduct was justified by various orders issued from time to time by the department after the Spanish war and not revoked until the promulgation of a general order dated September 23, 1903, recognizing Cuban postal conditions and classifications and setting forth United States regulations on matter originating in Cuba.

Charges are made by Kemper of similar conduct on the part of Mr. Bristow and Chief Postoffice Inspector Cochran. He says:

"In a period of nearly four years since my return from Cuba I received about 35 packages invariably in small quantities from friends in Cuba. During the same period Mr. Bristow and Chief Inspector Cochran received cigars without the payment of duty in the same manner as I did. If I am guilty of violating any law then Messrs. Bristow and Cochran are equally guilty."

In the same connection referring to the methods of the investigation, Kemper says that Frank Bacon, a delivery clerk in the register division of the local postoffice made an affidavit naming Bristow and Cochran, among others, as recipients of Cuban cigars free of duty and was therefore removed from the service. Such action so intimidated employees of the department, he says, that further information undesirable to the investigators was not forthcoming. Kemper denies the accusation concerning his relations with the General Mailfold company, of Franklin, Pa.

SHOCKING RECORD

Of the Number of Ohio Men and Boys
Killed During the Hunting Season
Just Closed.

Columbus, O., Dec. 2.—During the quail and rabbit hunting season just closed there were 37 Ohio men and boys killed or wounded. Ten deaths are recorded as results of the hunting season. Most of the deaths were occasioned by carelessness on the part of those killed, while the injuries are largely attributed to inexperience.

BOTH BADLY BURNED.

Marysville, O., Dec. 2.—While Mrs. W. W. Gohm of Mechanicsburg was dressing her two-year old daughter, Mildred, she left her standing in front of an open grate to answer a telephone call. Before she could return she heard the child screaming and soon found it enveloped in flames. Mrs. Gohm picked up a rug, hoping to extinguish the fire and threw it around the child. In doing so her own clothing became ignited and before the arrival of the neighbors, who extinguished the fire, both were badly burned, but may recover.

"ELIJAH" DOWIE IN HANDS OF RECEIVER

Zion City and Business Enterprises In Federal Court's Grip

Dowie's Appeals to Followers for Money Were in Vain and His Creditors Have Forced Appointment of Receivers, Who Have Charge of Property.

Judge Barnes, the head of the Zion legal department, with whom he had been closeted for an hour discussing the situation, agreed with him. "It's a very queer proceeding and I do not understand it," Dowie continued. "All of the bills would have been paid, and there was no occasion for such highhanded action as this." After these introductions were dispensed with the party sat down and began to talk over the situation. The affairs of the institution were rehearsed in a general way, and Receiver Currier was given a general idea of the way in which the affairs of the city run. Then the plans for the taking care of the property by the receivers was announced. As soon as Mr. Currier and his party arrived in Zion City a guard of half a dozen men were placed around the Zion administration building, in which the bank and all of the offices are located, to prevent the removal of any books or valuable papers.

Following this action and the conference with Dowie it was announced that the bank would not open for business in the morning. The receivers will go through it and the other offices to learn the exact financial condition of Dowie, and business will not be resumed in the administration building until this investigation is completed. All of the other industries will be opened, however, and conducted as they have been. The Dowieite employees will remain in their positions, but a committee of three or four custodians who are not connected with Zion City or Dowie in any way, will be appointed to be at the head of things and direct the stores and factories as well as all of the city departments.

Dowie had little to say about the receivership. All of his remarks on this question were directed to Mr. Currier. "This receivership will not last long," he said. "As soon as the books are examined and the true condition of affairs learned, the receivership will be dismissed. Everything will come out all right, and there is no cause for worry." All of the rules of Zion City, as a city, will be observed.

The schools and religious exercises will be as much under the domination of Dowie as ever, but Elijah will not be left in control of a single one of his enterprises.

Two Stories of a Shooting

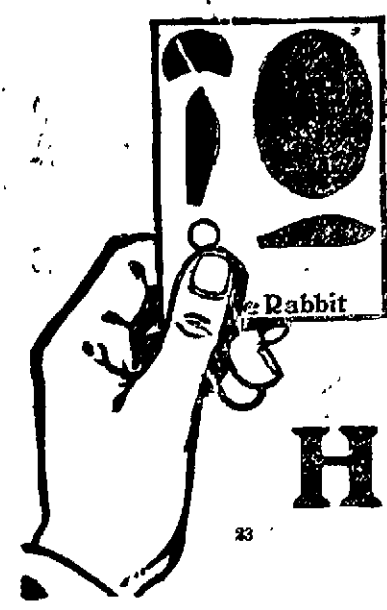

Connellsville, Pa., Dec. 2.—As the result of the alleged accidental discharge of a revolver last night, Miss Ada Grim, the 15 year old daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth Brooks, lies in a precarious condition at her home in Swagerstown. The girl says a young man of Coal Brook, called upon her Sunday night and that she met him on the back porch. "He put his arm around my neck," says the girl, "pressing me closely to him and fired the pistol." The young man says the shooting was accidental.

GRAND RAPID SCANDALS.

Sensational Developments in Court—Six Former Officials Plead Guilty as to Boodle Trans- actions in Lake Water Scandals.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Dec. 2.—There were sensational developments in a trial which pleased with the result. He was charged with the Lake water scandal, which was the subject of a sensational deal in court the other day. The case was practically decided upon last night when it was rumored that a former member of the Board of Public Health, Dr. J. C. McLaughlin, Stone, placed under arrest had weakened and would tell the prosecution all they knew about the boodle transactions.

Just this side of Paradise

The word California was first used by a Spanish writer more than four hundred years ago to describe an imaginary land which, he claimed, was "Just this side of Paradise."

Little did he know how nearly right he was, for of all the spots the sun's rays shine upon, California most nearly approaches one's idea of an earthly Paradise.

What One Little Girl Thought

ARCHBISHOP IRELAND, who is never without a good story, tells one that he holds to be one of the best illustrations of faith as well as of confidence in individual supplication at the throne of grace. The little six-year-old daughter of one of his parishioners is an exceedingly bright child—a little too bright, as the bishop explained—and she had been paying to have a little book sent to her. When her prayer was answered she was delighted and her faith greatly augmented thereby. But when one day, less than two years later, the gift was repeated she looked gravely apprehensive.

"I don't want two brothers," she explained, "and I'm sure I prayed too much. I hope God won't answer every prayer I made for a little brother by sending one for each."

But the best evidence of the responsibility she felt in the matter was disclosed on a subsequent occasion when she heard her father and mother discussing to a dinner table full of guests upon the merits and attractions of these two little sons.

"Yes," taunted this superior elder sister of six years, "and you wouldn't have had either one of them if it hadn't been for me."—New York Times

"Say, Jimmie, how many men d'yer s'pose he's killed?"

"Au, g'wan! Don't yer see he's a general. Generals don't do no killing. Dey jest bosses de job."—Chicago American.

A Vegetarian.

Dr. Henry Van Dyke, who is an admirer of girls, tells this story of a maiden named Dorothy, who always found some good excuse for having her own way. Dorothy's father came to her one evening and said:

"See here, Dorothy, I don't like young Freshman's coming here so much. Next time he makes you a visit just give him the cold shoulder."

"But, papa, he is a vegetarian," answered the unabashed Dorothy.—Philadelphia Ledger.

His Failing.

"Julia," said the living skeleton to the fat lady, "why don't you go over and sit with the ossified man awhile? Poor fellow, he would appreciate having a lady to talk with."

"Oh, he wears me," sniffed the fat lady. "He can't talk to a girl four minutes without wanting her to hold his hand. He's too soft for any use."—Judge.

Working Backward.

"Did you ask her father?"

"I did."

"What did he say?"

"He said yes."

"Then that settles it."

"Not much it doesn't. Now I've got to ask the girl."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Cupid Anno Domini

By RICHARD BAKER SHELTON

Copyright, 1931, by T. C. McClure

Clifford Worthington Todd was lovesome. Indeed as he sat disconsolately on the veranda and swinging his short legs he could not remember a time in the whole course of his eleven years' experience in this vale of tears when he had been so utterly alone.

Three days before his father and mother had started for Ohio to attend the wedding of Mr. Todd's favorite niece, and Clifford Worthington, given his own choice of accompanying them or remaining at home with Aunt Elinor, had chosen the latter course.

As a general thing, to stay at home with Aunt Elinor in charge of the household was about as near paradise as one could hope to get. Aunt Elinor was young and pretty and full of fun and, moreover, understood you. She wasn't forever saying, "Clifford, it is time for your nap," or "Clifford, what a dirty little boy! Go and cleanse yourself at once!" She would go to walk with you in the pine woods, and she didn't mind how many pine needles you threw over her. She would go out in the bay with you in the naphtha launch, and she could run the engine as well as Tarpey. She would read most delightful stories to you from a book with red and gold binding, and she knew just when you were hungry and smuggled you a plate of tarts from the cook. In Clifford Worthington Todd's eleven-year-old mind Aunt Elinor held first place, yet as he sat on the veranda rail, he gave utterance to his most lurid oath, a prolonged and doleful "Oh, gee!"

Yesterday afternoon a schooner yacht with glistening black hull and trim white sails had come into the bay and dropped anchor opposite the Todd cottage. A gig had put out from her, and a tall gentleman had disembarked at the little pier which ran out from the Todd's back lawn. This gentleman had seemed to know Aunt Elinor very well. She had introduced him to Clifford Worthington as Mr. Caverly.

The three had sat on the veranda, and Mr. Caverly had taken great interest in Clifford Worthington's conversation. When Mr. Caverly discovered that Clifford Worthington was possessed of some guinea pigs and that the said pigs were roaming about somewhere, perhaps even as far away as the woods at the end of the road, Mr. Caverly evinced a sudden interest in guinea pigs. He gave him 50 cents to catch them and bring them to the veranda for inspection.

Clifford had had a wild chase after them, but finally, after he had brought them back, struggling and squealing and himself perspiring, he had bumped into Mr. Caverly, who was making across the back lawn to the pier. At the corner of the house stood Aunt Elinor, her face white and what looked like tears in her eyes.

As Clifford Worthington reached her he heard her call: "Tom! Oh, Tom!" But Mr. Caverly strode straight to the pier and was rowed to the yacht. Aunt Elinor had gone upstairs, and Clifford Worthington had spent a stupid afternoon with the Seymour boys, which ended in a fight.

This morning had been no better. Breakfast was a sorry affair, with Aunt Elinor sitting opposite, chinking with every mouthful of toast and dabbling her eyes with her handkerchief. After breakfast she had said:

"I think you'll have to do without me this morning, old chap."

Her tone had a forced cheerfulness about it more doleful than groans. Still dabbling her eyes, she went upstairs, and Clifford heard her lock the door of her room. It was all very disheartening.

For a time he sat on the veranda. Then he decided to seek Tarpey. Tarpey was an eighteen-year-old mulatto, gardener, man of all work and engineer of the launch. Clifford found him propped up in the shade of the boat house reading some paper covered literature. Tarpey rose as he saw Clifford, made some remark about fixing the pansy bed and strode leisurely away, leaving the book behind. Clifford picked it up and began to read. It was filled with the adventures of Blackbeard, the pirate, and his trusty lieutenant, Yardarm Bill. It was badly reading, and by lunch time Clifford had read the book nearly through and was burning for adventure.

Aunt Elinor came down to lunch with very red eyes. She said they'd spend the afternoon in the woods, but Clifford said he had rather finish something he was doing. Aunt Elinor looked relieved.

After lunch he sought out Tarpey and divulged his scheme. Tarpey laughed and scouted it. Then Clifford showed him the half-dollar Mr. Caverly had donated for the cause of the guinea pigs, and Tarpey succumbed.

At 5 o'clock the launch put out from the pier and headed for the yacht. At the bow of the launch streamed a black flag with an attempt at skull and crossbones on it. Two fantastic figures made the crew. In the bow was Blackbeard, terrible in peaked paper cap and a formidable array of wooden swords, while Tarpey, alias Yardarm Bill, sat by the helm, a red sash about his waist. Tucked into it was an ancient pistol, a family heirloom, which Clifford Worthington had borrowed surreptitiously from the library.

The yacht had been becalmed all day, and now Caverly had paced her deck, waiting for a hurricane to put to sea in. The launch came alongside the yacht, and the two vessels scrambled aboard. Mr. Caverly met them gravely.

"Sur-render!" shouted Blackbeard. "Certainly—certainly," said Caverly, with well simulated terror. "Who are you?"

"I am Blackbeard," said Clifford, "and this," waving to Tarpey, "is my trusty lieutenant, Yardarm Bill."

"Charmed, I'm sure. Won't you come aft and discuss the terms of surrender, Mr. Blackbeard?" said Caverly suavely. "Steward, some cake and tarts and a pitcher of milk."

"Now, what are you going to do with me?" said Caverly when the steward had brought the tray.

"Pay tribute and leave these waters at once," said Blackbeard. "Yesterday you came to our—er—lair and gave pain to the heart of a woman."

"I?" said Caverly, amazed. "How?"

"It's Aunt Elinor," said Clifford. "She's been—been—bawling like time ever since you left."

Caverly sprang to his feet.

"See here," he said, "I'll go back with you as hostage."

"Yardarm Bill," said Blackbeard, "conduct your craven captain to our craft. I'm much obliged for the tarts," he added, his mouth full of the last one.

They found Aunt Elinor in the library. She rose as they came in.

"Tom," she said angrily, "how dared you?"

"I have it on the authority of the eminent Blackbeard," he said gravely, "that you've been—er—what was it?—'bawling' ever since I left. Elinor, dear, it was all my fault!"

"Tom," she said brokenly, "I called to you when you left—and—"

"Oh, Lord, to think I didn't hear you there," turning to the amazed Clifford Worthington and thrusting another half dollar into his hand, "I want Aunt Elinor to see Yardarm Bill. Won't you see if you can find him?"

Later they sat on the veranda in the moonlight. Clifford Worthington, in his brave array of peaked cap and wooden swords, fast asleep in the hammock.

"Looks like a belligerent young Mars, doesn't he?" laughed Caverly.

"Dear little Cupid Anno Domini!" said Aunt Elinor, stooping to kiss the sleeping god.

Back Stairs Science.

In the household of the late Sir Henry Wentworth Acland, regius professor of medicine at Oxford, there was so much talk of natural science, particularly at table, that even the servants theorized about it more or less profoundly.

In one instance the butler gave notice that either he or the page boy must leave.

"What is the trouble?" asked the master. "Aren't you well treated?"

"Yes, sir. I've nothing to complain of in that way," replied the butler, "but no one can tell, sir, how trying it is to work all day in the pantry with a boy who believes the world was created in periods when I know it was created in days."

A maid who had lived in the household many years did not vapor about the subject of general interest or try to discuss it in a partisan spirit. She was asked one day if she understood what the professor had been telling them.

"Oh, I never thought of doing that!" She was questioned further, and it came out that her appreciation of the table talk was impersonal.

"I look across at the dear doctor," she said, "and I think to myself, 'Oh poor dear gentleman, how you are enjoying yourself!'"

Argyll and Longfellow.

The great Duke of Argyll was visiting his son, then governor general of Canada, and met Longfellow in the American poet's ancient colonial mansion at Cambridge, Mass. As they sat together on the veranda the duke persistently asked the names of the various birds he saw and heard singing in the poet's trees as well as of the flowers and bushes growing in the extensive and beautiful garden. Longfellow was neither botanist nor ornithologist and did not know.

"I was surprised to find your Longfellow such an ignorant person," said the duke subsequently to an American acquaintance.

"Indeed! Pray, on what subject?"

"Why, he could not tell me the names of the birds and flowers to be heard and seen in his own garden."

"May I ask how many languages you speak?" the American asked.

"Certainly, but one."

"Mr. Longfellow," was the answer, "speaks six and translates freely from almost all the languages of Europe."—Criterion.

A WOULD BE CELIBATE

(Original.)

Paul Broomhead was a high church Episcopalian clergyman, with Roman Catholic tendencies, so high, in fact, that he announced that he would never marry. This was very disappointing to his father, who had heaped up millions and whose hobby was to establish a family. He resolved that his only son should marry or be disinherited. But being a politician he enlisted the services of Mrs. Cushing, a shrewd woman of the world. Mrs. Cushing proposed to entice the son with her niece, Miss Sherwood.

"She's but a child," said Mr. Broomhead senior.

"Seventeen. Your son is getting to an age when he prefers youth."

"She's a simpleton."

"Men are not attracted by attributes similar to those they themselves possess."

"I admit she is pretty. She looks at one out of her soft eyes with all the innocence of a babe."

"All except the innocence."

"Very well. I leave the whole matter to you. What next?"

"Tell your son that you wish him to marry Miss Sherwood. If Miss Sherwood declines the alliance, you will not insist on his marriage. If she consents, then he must complete his part or lose his inheritance."

Paul Broomhead, when informed of what was expected of him, was perplexed. He was resolved on celibacy, had told everybody that he would never marry, but he wanted his father's fortune to carry out some gigantic designs he had in view for the church. He resolved to win Miss Sherwood to an interest in his work; this she, by refusing to marry him, could save to him his father's millions. He asked permission to call on the young lady, and an evening was appointed. Miss Sherwood lived with her aunt, and that lady superintended the costume her niece wore on the occasion. Noticing that a tiny pimple marred the pink and white skin just beneath the girl's lips, she covered it with a bit of court plaster.

When the rector called, he found Miss Sherwood sitting demurely in the corner of a sofa in the drawing room. As he advanced she rose and stood with her eyes bent on the floor, a picture of maidenly modesty. Then the two sat down on the sofa side by side. Mr. Broomhead was accustomed to putting delicate cases, and he acquiesced himself well in this instance. He began by mentioning his father's wish with regard to their marriage. Marriage was a highly honorable institution—indeed, a part of the church itself. The young lady was attractive. He must admit that she was beautiful. He thought he could love her devotedly. Indeed, the possession of the delicate flower would in a way make his life a paradise. He could conceive of no greater blessing of Providence than to secure such a wife.

Miss Sherwood listened to this prelude with downcast eyes, absently smoothing out the folds of her dress, till he came to the last sentence, the last word, "wife." Then she looked up at him out of a pair of eyes that expressed the most ineffable tenderness. The clergyman proceeded, but the remainder of his discourse did not run quite so smoothly as his "firstly."

He pictured a higher life—higher even than holy matrimony—a life devoted to the cause of their Master. Think of the great good to be achieved with his father's fortune in leading countless millions to the church, the splendid edifices that might be built, the homes for the church orders, both men and women. Think of that nobler friendship that would exist between the two, be working day and night in the church, in the mission house, in the slums; she devoted to the same cause as a member of a sisterhood. "I ask you, beloved," he concluded, "would you not prefer this nobler life preparatory to the higher existence to?"

He stopped short. Miss Sherwood had burst into a flood of tears and was weeping on his shoulder.

"Dear little girl, calm yourself. Perhaps I have asked too much of you. We will think it over. There, try and cease this convulsive sobbing."

His arm was around her waist, his hand was smoothing the beautiful whirlpools of hair that had been set whirling under Mrs. Cushing's special guidance. Then there was silence.

During the evening several people, members of young Broomhead's flock, called on Mrs. Cushing. Evidence is not forthcoming whether they came by invitation or merely happened in. About 11 o'clock these people were sitting in a room directly opposite the drawing room when Mr. Broomhead emerged, looking very much flustered, followed by Miss Sherwood, as composed and innocent looking as a blue violet. All were surprised to see their rector in the house, inasmuch as his presence there had not been mentioned. Mr. Broomhead advanced with embarrassment to meet them, and there was a bit of small talk. Then one of the ladies began to titter. She whispered something to one of the others, who began to titter also. At last the whole party were laughing, and laughing at the clergyman.

"Mr. Broomhead," remarked Mrs. Cushing seriously, "I was not aware that men wore heavy spots."

The rector put his hand to his chin, pulled off a piece of court plaster, looked at it on the tip of his finger and turned scarlet. Miss Sherwood showed not the least distress—indeed she appeared to be very proud of herself.

There was but one course left open for the clergyman.

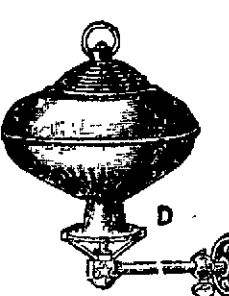

"My friends," he said, "I have to announce my engagement to Miss Sherwood."

A Good Tip

To the Man That Works Out Doors.

We have just received a shipment of heavy hair-lined Kangaroo Calf Shoes. Just the thing for the man that must be out in the weather. As soon as the men see these shoes, they and the shoes become close friends. It is a hard matter to get a shoe that will keep your feet warm and dry on cold, snowy days. But we have been successful in securing this kind of a shoe for you.

It is made of genuine Kangaroo Calf stock, with a good heavy double sole and a heavy hair lining. A real workman's shoe and we are selling them at the reasonable price of $2.50.

You can't afford to go with cold wet feet when you can get a shoe like this. Drop in and have a look at them at least.

Elected Death House Mayor

Ossining, N. Y., Dec. 2.—Albert T. Patrick, under sentence of death for the murder of Millionaire William M. Rice, has been elected Mayor of the death house in the prison. It is customary for the prisoners under sentence of death to elect a mayor to serve for a year unless "removed."

Patrick succeeded Arthur Flanagan, when the latter was electrocuted last spring. He has now been re-elected. After the "election" Patrick thanked his fellow prisoners for their confidence in him and assured them he would try to rule them with fairness and to their entire satisfaction. There are nine prisoners in the death house.

TOBACCO

STOLEN FROM GENERAL STORE AT VANATTA

Thieves Did Not Touch Money or Stamps in Postoffice—Robbers Probably from Newark.

The general merchandise store of S. D. Lyons at Vanatta was broken into early Wednesday morning and some tobacco and cigars were taken. Mr. Lyons is postmaster at Vanatta and the office is run in connection with the store. Nothing was taken from the postoffice, however.

When Mr. Lyons went to open the store about 6.30 o'clock Wednesday morning he discovered that the lock had been broken from the front door and the store entered. An investigation showed that nothing had been taken excepting cigars and tobacco.

A light snow had fallen during the first part of the night and tracks of a horse and buggy were seen in front of the store. The thieves appeared to have come from Newark and to have gone north.

There was some money in the store as well as stamps in the postoffice, and it seems peculiar that this or articles of more value than tobacco were not taken.

Suspensions are entertained against certain persons, although their identity could not be learned. Mr. Lyons telephoned to the police at Newark as soon as he had learned of the robbery.

CHAN MEE

EXHIBITED A NATURALIZATION DOCUMENT IN TOLEDO.

The Newark Chinaman was Never Granted Naturalization Papers According to Records.

Toledo, O., Dec. 2.—Chan Mee, a Newark Chinaman, has made application before Col. Morrow, a Chinese inspector, for papers permitting him to visit his native land. Chan Mee exhibited with his application, naturalization papers issued from the probate court of Newark in 1899.

As a matter of fact the federal law does not permit granting naturalization papers to a Chinaman and the matter may be investigated. Col. Morrow has submitted the matter to Washington authorities.

It appears in the probate court here that naturalization papers were never granted. In 1894, Chan Mee appeared before Mr. L. P. Ohlinger, a collector of internal revenue for the 18th District of Ohio, and made application for naturalization. The Chinaman was given a certificate of application and it was this paper that was presented to Col. Morrow.

In 1899 Chan Mee appeared before Judge Waldo Taylor and asked for the naturalization papers. The records show that the blank form was partially filled by either Chan Mee or Judge Taylor.

ROSECRANS-MOORE.

The Sunbury News-Item prints the following wedding notice which will interest Newark relatives and friends of the bride and groom.

The beautiful country home of Mr. and Mrs. McPeck was the scene of a most delightful event on Wednesday evening, November 11, at which time he lives of Miss Grace Jenetta Moore of West Carlisle, Ohio, and David B. Rosecrans living near Sunbury were united in marriage. Promptly at 7:30 the bridal pair entered the archedway to the north parlor which was beautifully decorated with flowers, ferns and palms. The archedway being artistically festooned with cypress vines and white ribbon. Here the beautiful marriage service of the Christian church was performed by the Rev. S. S. Main, pastor of the Trenton church, in the presence of the immediate families.

The bride was prettily gowned in a suit of white handsomely draped in lace, while the groom wore the conventional black. Immediately after congratulations the entire wedding party was invited to the dining rooms, where an elaborate two course wedding luncheon was served.

The bride is a very popular young lady in Coshococ county, and is well known in this community, having visited friends and relatives here since the days of her childhood, while the groom is equally well known in Sunbury and surrounding community, having lived here all his life. The newly wedded pair will reside north of Sunbury where they will be at home to their friends.

TWO BOARDS CONFLICT.

Lancaster, O., Dec. 2.—The board of public service has demanded that the board of education pay for the gas burned in the public schools at the price it is furnished to private consumers, 40c per 1000 cubic feet. The latter body thinks if the city building be furnished free to the schools, which are city institutions, are also entitled to it. A joint meeting was held, but no agreement could be reached and the school board ordered the gas bills paid under protest. The situation is peculiar and can not arise anywhere else Ohio, as Lancaster is the only city in the state that owns its own gas plant. The board of education will probably bring the matter before the state legislature.

Just this side of Paradise

The word California was first used by a Spanish writer more than four hundred years ago to describe an imaginary land which, he claimed, was "Just this side of Paradise."

Little did he know how nearly right he was, for of all the spots the sun's rays shine upon, California most nearly approaches one's idea of an earthly Paradise.

And it isn't far away—you can make the round trip from Chicago in a week. But you'll stay longer.

What One Little Girl Thought

ARCHBISHOP IRELAND, who is never without a good story, tells one that he holds to be one of the best illustrations of faith as well as of confidence in individual supplication at the throne of grace. The little six-year-old daughter of one of his parishioners is an exceedingly bright child—a little too bright, as the bishop explains—and she had been praying to have a little brother sent to her. When her prayer was answered she was delighted and her faith greatly augmented thereby. But when one day, less than two years later, the gift was repeated she looked gravely apprehensive.

"I don't want two brothers," she explained, "and I'm sure I prayed too much. I hope God won't answer every prayer I made for a little brother by sending one for each."

But the best evidence of the responsibility she felt in the matter was disclosed on a subsequent occasion when she heard her father and mother discussing to a dinner table full of guests upon the merits and attractions of these two little sons.

"Yes," taunted this superior elder sister of six years, "and you wouldn't have had either one of them if it hadn't been for me."—New York Times

A Vegetarian.

Dr. Henry Van Dyke, who is an admirer of girls, tells this story of a maiden named Dorothy, who always found some good excuse for having her own way. Dorothy's father came to her one evening and said:

"See here, Dorothy, I don't like young Freshman's coming here so much. Next time he makes you a visit just give him the cold shoulder."

"But, papa, he is a vegetarian," answered the unabashed Dorothy.—Philadelphia Ledger.

His Felling.

"Julia," said the living skeleton to the fat lady, "why don't you go over and sit with the ossified man awhile? Poor fellow, he would appreciate having a lady to talk with."

"Oh, he wears me," sniffed the fat lady. "He can't talk to a girl four minutes without wanting her to hold his hand. He's too soft for any use."—Judge.

Working Backward.

"Did you ask her father?"

"I did."

"What did he say?"

"He said yes."

"Then that settles it."

"Not much it doesn't. Now I've got to ask the girl."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Cupid Anno Domini

By RICHARD BARKER SHELTON

Clifford Worthington Todd was lonely. Indeed as he sat disconsolately on the veranda and swinging his short legs he could not remember a time in the whole course of his eleven years' experience in this vale of tears when he had been so utterly alone.

Three days before his father and mother had started for Ohio to attend the wedding of Dr. Todd's favorite niece, and Clifford Worthington, given his own choice of accompanying them or remaining at home with Aunt Elinor, had chosen the latter course.

As a general thing, to stay at home with Aunt Elinor in charge of the household was about as near paradise as one could hope to get. Aunt Elinor was young and pretty and full of fun and, moreover, understood you. She wasn't forever saying, "Clifford, it is time for your nap," or "Clifford, what a dirty little boy! Go and cleanse yourself at once." She would go to walk with you in the pine woods, and she didn't mind how many pine needles you threw over her. She would go out in the bay with you in the naphtha launch, and she could run the engine as well as Tarpey. She would read most delightful stories to you from a book with red and gold binding, and she knew just when you were hungry and smuggled you a plate of tarts from the cook. In Clifford Worthington Todd's eleven-year-old mind Aunt Elinor held first place, yet as he sat on the veranda rail, he gave utterance to his most lurid oath, a prolonged and doleful "Oh, gee!"

Yesterday afternoon a schooner yacht with glistening black hull and trim white sails had come into the bay and dropped anchor opposite the Todd cottage. A gig had put out from her, and a tall gentleman had disembarked at the little pier which ran out from the Todd's back lawn. This gentleman had seemed to know Aunt Elinor very well. She had introduced him to Clifford Worthington as Mr. Caverly.

The three had sat on the veranda, and Mr. Caverly had taken great interest in Clifford Worthington's conversation. When Mr. Caverly discovered that Clifford Worthington was possessed of some guinea pigs and that the said pigs were roaming about somewhere, perhaps even as far away as the woods at the end of the road, Mr. Caverly evinced a sudden interest in guinea pigs. He gave him 50 cents to catch them and bring them to the veranda for inspection.

Clifford had had a wild chase after them, but finally, after he had brought them back, struggling and squealing and himself perspiring, he had bumped into Mr. Caverly, who was making across the back lawn to the pier. At the corner of the house stood Aunt Elinor, her face white and what looked like tears in her eyes.

As Clifford Worthington reached her he heard her call: "Tom! Oh, Tom!" But Mr. Caverly strode straight to the pier and was rowed to the yacht. Aunt Elinor had gone upstairs, and Clifford Worthington had spent a stupid afternoon with the Seymour boys, which ended in a fight.

This morning had been no better. Breakfast was a sorry affair, with Aunt Elinor sitting opposite, chinking with every mouthful of toast and dabbling her eyes with her handkerchief. After breakfast she had said:

"I think you'll have to do without me this morning, old chap."

Her tone had a forced cheerfulness about it more doleful than groans. Still dabbling her eyes, she went upstairs, and Clifford heard her lock the door of her room. It was all very disheartening.

For a time he sat on the veranda. Then he decided to seek Tarpey. Tarpey was an eighteen-year-old mulatto, gardener, man of all work and engineer of the launch. Clifford found him propped up in the shade of the boat house reading some paper covered literature. Tarpey rose as he saw Clifford, made some remark about fixing the panny bed and strolled leisurely away, leaving the book behind. Clifford picked it up and began to read. It was filled with the adventures of Blackbeard, the pirate, and his trusty lieutenant, Yardarm Bill. It was badly reading, and by lunch time Clifford had read the book nearly through and was burning for adventure.

Aunt Elinor came down to lunch with very red eyes. She said they'd spend the afternoon in the woods, but Clifford said he had rather finish something he was doing. Aunt Elinor looked relieved.

After lunch he sought out Tarpey and divulged his scheme. Tarpey laughed and consented. Then Clifford showed him the half dollar Mr. Caverly had donated for the chase of the guinea pigs, and Tarpey snatched it.

At 5 o'clock the launch put out from the pier and headed for the yacht. At the bow of the launch streamed a black flag with an attempt at skull and crossbones on it. Two fantastic figures made the crew. In the bow was Blackbeard, terrible in peaked paper cap and a formidable array of wooden swords, while Tarpey, all in Yardarm Bill, sat by the helm, a red sash about his waist. Tucked into it was an ancient pistol, a family heirloom, which Clifford Worthington had borrowed surreptitiously from the library.

They had been launched all day, and now Caverly had passed her deck paying for a launch to put to sea in. The launch came alongside the yacht, and the two pirates scrambled aboard. Mr. Caverly met them gravely.

"Surrender!" shouted Blackbeard. "Certainly—certainly," said Caverly, with well simulated terror. "Who are you?"

"I am Blackbeard," said Clifford, "and this," waving to Tarpey, "is my trusty lieutenant, Yardarm Bill."

"Charmed, I'm sure. Won't you come aft and discuss the terms of surrender, Mr. Blackbeard?" said Caverly suavely. "Steward, some cake and tarts and a pitcher of milk."

"Now, what are you going to do with me?" said Caverly when the steward had brought the tray.

"Pay tribute and leave these waters at once," said Blackbeard. "Yesterday you came to our—er—lark, and gave pain to the heart of a woman."

"If?" said Caverly, amazed. "How?"

"It's Aunt Elinor," said Clifford. "She's been—been—bawling like time ever since you left."

Caverly sprang to his feet.

"See here," he said, "I'll go back with you as hostage."

"Yardarm Bill," said Blackbeard, "conduct your craven captain to our craft. I'm much obliged for the tarts," he added, his mouth full of the last one.

They found Aunt Elinor in the library. She rose as they came in.

"Tom," she said angrily, "how dared you?"

"I have it on the authority of the eminent Blackbeard," he said gravely, "that you've been—er—what was it?—'bawling' ever since I left. Elinor, dear, it was all my fault!"

"Tom," she said brokenly, "I called to you when you left—and—"

"Oh, Lord, to think I didn't hear you. Here," turning to the amazed Clifford Worthington and thrusting another half dollar into his hand, "I want Aunt Elinor to see Yardarm Bill. Won't you see if you can find him?"

Later they sat on the veranda in the moonlight. Clifford Worthington, in his brave array of peaked cap and wooden swords, fast asleep in the hammock.

"Looks like a belligerent young Mars, doesn't he?" laughed Caverly.

"Dear little Cupid Anno Domini!" said Aunt Elinor, stooping to kiss the sleeping god.

Back Stairs Science.

In the household of the late Sir Henry Wortworth Acland, regius professor of medicine at Oxford, there was so much talk of natural science, particularly at table, that even the servants theorized about it more or less profoundly.

In one instance the butler gave notice that either he or the page boy must leave.

"What is the trouble?" asked the master. "Aren't you well treated?"

"Yes, sir. I've nothing to complain of in that way," replied the butler, "but no one can tell, sir, how trying it is to work all day in the pantry with a boy who believes the world was created in periods when I know it was created in days."

A maid who had lived in the household many years did not vapor about the subject of general interest or try to discuss it in a partisan spirit. She was asked one day if she understood what the professor had been telling them.

"Oh, I never thought of doing that!" She was questioned further, and it came out that her appreciation of the table talk was impersonal.

"I look across at the dear doctor," she said, "and I think to myself, 'Oh poor dear gentleman, how you are enjoying yourself!'"

Argyll and Longfellow.

The Duke of Argyll was visiting his son, then governor general of Canada, and met Longfellow in the American poet's ancient colonial mansion at Cambridge, Mass. As they sat together on the veranda the duke persistently asked the names of the various birds he saw and heard singing in the poet's trees as well as of the flowers and bushes growing in his extensive and beautiful garden. Longfellow was neither botanist nor ornithologist and did not know.

"I was surprised to find your Longfellow such an ignorant person," said the duke subsequently to an American acquaintance.

"Indeed! Pray, on what subject?"

"Why, he could not tell me the names of the birds and flowers to be heard and seen in his own garden."

"May I ask how many languages you speak?" the American asked.

"Certainly, but one."

"Mr. Longfellow," was the answer, "speaks six and translates freely from almost all the languages of Europe."—Criterion.

A Very Different Matter.

Ethel—I heard the count had jilted Gladys.

Jean—Oh, no; he's too much of a gentleman for that. I know positively that he gave Gladys three days in which to jilt him.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

No Trouble.

Anxious Mother—Willie, dear, do you ever have any trouble with the other little boys at school?

Willie—Now! I lick one of 'em every once in awhile, but that ain't the least bit of trouble.—Chicago Tribune.

The Accepted Pattern.

"His brother aeromants do not think well of him."

"What has he done?"

"Violated the ethics of the profession; invented an air ship that wasn't cigar shaped."—Washington Star.

Its Distinction.

City Man—How shall I know which house it is?

Suburbanite—You'll be able to tell easily enough. It's the only one in the neighborhood that hasn't a "For Sale" sign on it.—Puck.

A WOULD BE CELIBATE

(Original.)

Paul Broomhead was a high church Episcopalian clergyman, with Roman Catholic tendencies, so high, in fact, that he announced that he would never marry. "This was very disappointing to his father, who had heaped up millions and whose hobby was to establish a family. He resolved that his only son should marry or be disinherited. But being a politic man he enlisted the services of Mrs. Cushing, a shrewd woman of the world. Mrs. Cushing proposed to entice the son with her niece, Miss Sherwood.

"She's but a child," said Mr. Broomhead senior.

"Seventeen. Your son is getting to an age when he prefers youth."

"She's a simpleton."

"Men are not attracted by attributes similar to those they themselves possess."

"I admit she is pretty. She looks at one out of her soft eyes with all the innocence of a babe."

"All except the innocence."

"Very well. I leave the whole matter to you. What next?"

"Tell your son that you wish him to marry Miss Sherwood. If Miss Sherwood declines the alliance, you will not insist on his marriage. If she consents, then he must complete his part or lose his inheritance."

Paul Broomhead, when informed of what was expected of him, was perplexed. He was resolved on celibacy, had told everybody that he would never marry, but he wanted his father's fortune to carry out some gigantic designs he had in view for the church. He resolved to win Miss Sherwood to an interest in his work; thus she, by refusing to marry him, could save to him his father's millions. He asked permission to call on the young lady, and an evening was appointed. Miss Sherwood lived with her aunt, and that lady superintended the costume her niece wore on the occasion. Noticing that a tiny pimple marred the pink and white skin just beneath the girl's lips, she covered it with a bit of court plaster.

When the rector called, he found Miss Sherwood sitting demurely in the corner of a sofa in the drawing room. As he advanced she rose and stood with her eyes bent on the floor, a picture of maidenly modesty. Then the two sat down on the sofa side by side.

Mr. Broomhead was accustomed to putting delicate cases, and he acquitted himself well in this instance. He began by mentioning his father's wish with regard to their marriage. Marriage was a highly honorable institution—indeed, a part of the church itself. The young lady was attractive. He must admit that she was beautiful. He thought he could love her devotedly. Indeed, the possession of the delicate flower would in a way make his life a paradise. He could conceive of no greater blessing of Providence than to secure such a wife.

Miss Sherwood listened to this prelude with downcast eyes, absently smoothing out the folds of her dress, till he came to the last sentence, the last word, "wife." Then she looked up at him out of a pair of eyes that expressed the most ineffable tenderness. The clergyman proceeded, but the remainder of his discourse did not run quite so smoothly as his "firstly."

He pictured a higher life—higher even than holy matrimony—a life devoted to the cause of their Master. Think of the great good to be achieved with his father's fortune in leading countless millions to the church, the splendid edifices that might be built, the homes for the church orders, both men and women. Think of that nobler friendship that would exist between the two, he working day and night in the channel, in the mission house, in the slums; she devoted to the same cause as a member of a sisterhood. "I ask you, beloved," he concluded, "would you not prefer this nobler life preparatory to the higher existence to—"

He stopped short. Miss Sherwood had burst into a flood of tears and was weeping on his shoulder.

"Dear little girl, calm yourself. Perhaps I have asked too much of you. We will think it over. There, try and cease this convulsive sobbing."

His arm was around her waist, his hand was smoothing the beautiful whirlpools of hair that had been set whirling under Mrs. Cushing's special guidance. Then there was silence.

During the evening several people, members of young Broomhead's flock, called on Mrs. Cushing. Evidence is not forthcoming whether they came by invitation or merely happened in. About 11 o'clock these people were sitting in a room directly opposite the drawing room when Mr. Broomhead emerged, looking very much flustered, followed by Miss Sherwood, as composed and innocent looking as a blue violet. All were surprised to see their rector in the house, inasmuch as his presence there had not been mentioned. Mr. Broomhead advanced with embarrassment to meet them, and there was a bit of small talk. Then one of the ladies began to titter. She whispered something to one of the others, who began to titter also. At last the whole party were laughing and laughing at the clergyman.

"Mr. Broomhead," remarked Mrs. Cushing seriously, "I was not aware that men wore beauty spots."

The rector put his hand to his chin, pulled off a piece of court plaster, looked at it on the tip of his finger and yawned. Miss Sherwood showed that she was very proud of herself.

There was but one course left open for the clergyman.

"My friends," he said, "I have to announce my engagement to Miss Sherwood."

Elected Death House Mayor

Ossining, N. Y., Dec. 2.—Albert T. Patrick, under sentence of death for the murder of Millionaire William M. Rice, has been elected Mayor of the death house in the prison. It is customary for the prisoners under sentence of death to elect a mayor to serve for a year unless "removed."

Patrick succeeded Arthur Flanagan, when the latter was electrocuted last spring. He has now been re-elected. After the "election" Patrick thanked his fellow prisoners for their confidence in him and assured them he would try to rule them with fairness and to their entire satisfaction. There are nine prisoners in the death house.

Farm laborers in Mexico may be employed at from 18 to 20 cents a day, though in many parts of the country they are scarce and unreliable.

There is a special building for sculpture on Art Hill, St. Louis World's Fair grounds.

There is nothing so important in facing severe cold weather as a well organized digestive force. When the stomach properly digests nutritious food it creates new rich blood; and fortifies the system against cold.

Walther's Peptonized Port, to be found at all drug stores, is an ideal combination of pure, rich port and the best quality of pepsin. It strengthens the weak digestive organs, restores the appetite, builds and tones up the entire system.

For invalids convalescents and worn out people, there is nothing so beneficial as Walther's Peptonized Port. For sale by F. D. Hall.

Small size 50 cents, large size $1.00.

TOBACCO

STOLEN FROM GENERAL STORE AT VANATTA

Thieves Did Not Touch Money or Stamps in Postoffice—Robbers Probably from Newark.

The general merchandise store of S. D. Lyons at Vanatta was broken into early Wednesday morning and some tobacco and cigars were taken. Mr. Lyons is postmaster at Vanatta and the office is run in connection with the store. Nothing was taken from the postoffice, however.

When Mr. Lyons went to open the store about 6.30 o'clock Wednesday morning he discovered that the lock had been broken from the front door and the store entered. An investigation showed that nothing had been taken excepting cigars and tobacco.

A light snow had fallen during the first part of the night and tracks of a horse and buggy were seen in front of the store. The thieves appeared to have come from Newark and to have gone north.

There was some money in the store as well as stamps in the postoffice, and it seems peculiar that this or articles of more value than tobacco were not taken.

Suspicion is entertained against certain persons, although their identity could not be learned. Mr. Lyons telephoned to the police at Newark as soon as he had learned of the robbery.

CHAN MEE

EXHIBITED A NATURALIZATION DOCUMENT IN TOLEDO.

The Newark Chinaman was Never Granted Naturalization Papers According to Records.

Toledo, O., Dec. 2.—Chan Mee, a Newark Chinaman, has made application before Col. Morrow, a Chinese inspector, for papers permitting him to visit his native land. Chan Mee exhibited with his application, naturalization papers issued from the probate court of Newark in 1899.

As a matter of fact the federal law does not permit granting naturalization papers to a Chinaman and the matter may be investigated. Col. Morrow has submitted the matter to Washington authorities.

It appears in the probate court here that naturalization papers were never granted. In 1894, Chan Mee appeared before Mr. L. P. Ohlinger, a collector of internal revenue for the 18th District of Ohio, and made application for naturalization. The Chinaman was given a certificate of application and it was this paper that was presented to Col. Morrow.

In 1899 Chan Mee appeared before Judge Waldo Taylor and asked for the naturalization papers. The records show that the blank form was partially filled by either Chan Mee or Judge Taylor.

ROSECRANS-MOORE.

The Sunbury News-Item prints the following wedding notice which will interest Newark relatives and friends of the bride and groom.

The beautiful country home of Mr. and Mrs. McPeck was the scene of a most delightful event on Wednesday evening, November 11, at which time he lives of Miss Grace Jenetta Moore of West Carlisle, Ohio, and David B. Rosecrans living near Sunbury were united in marriage. Promptly at 7.30 the bridal pair entered the archway to the north parlor which was beautifully decorated with flowers, ferns and palms. The archway being artistically festooned with cypress vines and white ribbon. Here the beautiful marriage service of the Christian church was performed by the Rev. S. S. Main, pastor of the Trenton church, in the presence of the immediate families.

The bride was prettily gowned in a suit of white handsomely draped in lace, while the groom wore the conventional black. Immediately after congratulations the entire wedding party was invited to the dining rooms, where an elaborate two course wedding luncheon was served.

The bride is a very popular young lady in Coshocton county, and is well known in this community, having visited friends and relatives here since the days of her childhood, while the groom is equally well known in Sunbury and surrounding community, having lived here all his life. The newly wedded pair will reside north of Sunbury where they will be at home to their friends.

TWO BOARDS CONFLICT.

Lancaster, O., Dec. 2.—The board of public service has demanded that the board of education pay for the gas burned in the public schools at the price it is furnished to private consumers, ten cents per therm and feet. The latter body thinks if the city building be furnished free gas the schools, which are city institutions, are also entitled to it. A joint meeting was held, but no agreement could be reached and the school board ordered the gas bill paid under protest. The situation is peculiar and can not arrive at any agreement. The Ohio, a Lancaster is the only city in the state that owns its own gas plant. The board of education will probably bring the matter before the state legislature.

Medical Report

On the Demoralized Conditions at Butler, Pa.—Typhoid Epidemic There Caused by Impure Water.

Harrisburg, Pa., Dec. 2.—Dr. Benjamin Lee, secretary of the state board of health, has sent to the governor his report of conditions existing in fever-stricken Butler. The governor has ordered the auditor general to issue a warrant for $2,000 from the emergency fund as state aid to the sufferers.

Dr. Lee reports that he town is in a demoralized condition, the schools are closed because there are no teachers for pupils to attend them, that no record was kept of the number of cases of typhoid, that he found a little more than half the doctors were attending 555 cases and that the epidemic was caused by impure water.

WITHOUT TRAIN SERVICE.

Zanesville, O., Dec. 2.—Because Frazzburgh is enforcing an ordinance limiting the speed of trains to eight miles an hour within the town limits against the Pennsylvania railroad company the latter has cut off all trains of any value to the town. A band of 20 men and a locomotive are in the town and the Postal Telegraph office. The town is practically without train service.

The average age of death of workmen in East London is about 29, whereas in the well-to-do districts of West London the average age is about 75.

The American President being guarded by a small army of policemen and a party of detectives which he goes abroad is not a pleasant sight. The other day, while President Roosevelt was attending a funeral in New York, 700 policemen were detailed to protect him, 25 detectives and officers surrounded his person, besides a large guard in the church. And yet a "crank" of singular appearance had no difficulty in passing through his guard and approaching near enough to the President to hand him a paper. The man was harmless. On the same day the sultan made one of his state journeys to the mosque and was not so carefully guarded as the President. Mr. Roosevelt likes to travel in state, whether to funeral, church or wedding. Recall the Hanna wedding spectacle.

OLNEY AND FOLK.

(Springfield, Mass.) Republican.
Ex-President Cleveland's remarks about the election results in Ohio did not look as if he contemplated the possibility of another nomination for the presidency. Now, one standing close to him confirms the impression. Mr. Bryan knows now that he is out of it. Radical men, like Tom Johnson, stand with him. The old antagonism needs to be buried and not revived. The sober sense of the country is beginning to look for a safe man, a statesman who will have respect for precedents and righteousness in essence as well as in his service, for a Democrat whose regard for the interests of the masses is genuine, if not spectacular. If the Democrats should, by rare good fortune, agree upon the ticket of Olney and Folk, for example, there would be a cordial welcome for it throughout the United States. It would grow and not wane after the convention.

WHY NOT GO TO THE ROOT?

"Bribery and blackmailing" on the part of staffs of subordinates in the postoffice department is the heinous crime that has just been made public. It is not necessary to follow the intricacies of the boodle gang that has been going on for months. The President and his attorneys can easily discover the facts of "blackmailing and bribery," and hint it has been an evolution by the officeholders, in their greed and inhuman propensities. Well on to a hundred are held responsible, and the plunder runs into hundreds of thousands, or millions of dollars, with the service tainted and demoralized. They are all Republican politicians of more or less prominence. The President is not candid, and does not dig deep enough. Who started, prompted or encouraged the postal raids? Who but the serviceable instruments of Republican machines and bosses in different States? The evidence is clear and conclusive. The postal thieves took up the principles and practices of civil service as set forth by Quay and Platt and Hanna, and other senators whose friends went shares in and out, and decided and conspired for the loot. The lesson was that there was no harm in stealing for a party, or for anyone else, provided it was not found out. The decadence and rottenness in the postal service is in plain words attributable to the senators and politicians to whom the President entrusted his power of appointment. These men bought and paid for their offices. The papers have been full of it for months giving time, place and circumstance. It is no such mystery as Mr. Roosevelt endeavors to make out. He was well aware of the origin of the looting, and by whom it was encouraged and promoted, but he lacked the courage to nail the responsibility on the party leaders, the men to whom the Republicans give honor and confidence, and to whom the President goes for advice. It was the Republicans in its official relations to the Government service who plundered Uncle Sam's mails.

THE MAYOR OF NEW SMYRNA, FLORIDA,

WRITES A LETTER TO THE HOME OF VINOL.

Mr. Frank D. Hall Publishes it to Show How the Fame of His Vinol is Spreading.

"We have continually been publishing facts about the great good Vinol has been doing right here in town," explained Mr. Hall, our well known druggist, "and it is with pride we are permitted to publish herewith a letter from a far-off city, showing that the unquestionable merit of Vinol is being recognized in all parts of the country. The Hon. C. G. Hesse, Mayor of New Smyrna, Fla., writes:

"It must afford you great satisfaction to know that you have succeeded in placing before the people a cod liver oil preparation of such high merit and great curative power as Vinol. I know of nothing superior in cases of throat and lung troubles, and to build up the system after wasting diseases.

Vinol invigorates the system, heals diseases, induces appetite and helps assimilate the food. In fact, it assists nature to perform her duties without friction, and this always means good health. I am satisfied Vinol's marvelous rebuilding power is derived from the valuable curative medicinal elements found in the cod liver, which by your admirable method you are able to administer without a drop of oil or any disagreeable feature.

"Such a high-class preparation, which I know from experience does all and more than it claims, has my hearty endorsement."

HON. C. G. HESSE.

Such testimony as this is valuable because it is genuine. Such a man as the Hon. Mr. Hesse would not go out of his way to voluntarily recommend Vinol unless he knew it was worthy. This seems to back up what we have been claiming so long for Vinol, and is published for that purpose.

There is not a shadow of doubt about Vinol being the greatest preparation of cod liver oil ever sold to the American public, and therefore it must be the greatest tonic reconstitutor known to medicine.

"In the strongest manner we unhesitatingly endorse and guarantee Vinol to increase the appetite, cure stomach troubles, give strength and renewed vitality to the aged, build up the run down, tired and debilitated, make the weak strong, cure chronic coughs, colds and build up the convalescent, or will return to the purchaser every dollar paid for it." Frank D. Hall, Druggist.

AMUSEMENTS.

The cast for "A Mountain Pink" has been selected from among the very best Newark talent obtainable, and those attending will find many surprises in store for them. New songs, special scenery, new specialties and a good, strong cast of players will characterize this production as one of the best ever seen in this city.

Prominent among the characters are Col. Mark Gratton, a choleric gentleman of the old school, whose high sense of honor comes from ancient lineage, ably handled by Mr. Rollin F. Williams, the well known and popular letter-carrier; Jack Weeks and Samantha, his wife, are strong character parts chosen from among the mountain people as opposites of the first families and typical of the class known as "poor white trash." Mr. Clyde Doughty, the popular football player, who has distinguished himself on the gridiron as a member of the High School team, handles the part of Jack Weeks in a manner that leaves no doubt of his ability. On the character of Samantha, a large part of the play depends. The management are very fortunate in securing a competent person to portray this very difficult role. Miss Grace Hagar, a young lady whom the management has secured for this role is beyond a question one of the most talented of Newark's fair belles of which we have many. Miss Hagar's friends will be surprised at the perfect portrayal of this difficult role and the management predicts success for her as a character delineator.

Belle Teafon, the sparkling and liberal-minded daughter of the Colonel is ably handled by Miss S. Azenia Price, whom Newark people have reason to be proud of as an elocutionist and teacher of rare ability. Miss Price has a difficult role and the manner in which she presents it is highly satisfactory to the management.

Harold Wilmot, a young man of noble birth and fortune, who is in search of the missing Nondas, to whom he was betrothed when a lad by the parents of himself and the missing heiress, is handled in a capable manner by Mr. Harry Payne, formerly of the Ferris Comedians, and an actor of no mean ability.

Felix Bonnelly, captain of moonshiners, and a man of many crimes, is impersonated in a striking manner by Dr. Charles B. Koeler, the well-known dentist.

The character of Nondas Bonnelly, the beautiful but erring daughter of Captain Bonnelly, is in the capable hands of Miss Jay Edwards, an elocutionist of considerable note, and one of our society belles.

Sincerity Weeks, whose native purity and simplicity have earned for her the sobriquet of a Mountain Pink, is taken by Newark's beautiful and talented young lady, Miss Mayme Dickson.

A southern play would not be complete without a strong negro character. In "A Mountain Pink" we have Scip, a body-servant of Colonel Gratton, and a most amusing fellow. The comic situations this character introduces will be in the hands of Clinton Phillips, the well-known comedian.

Jerry Richards, a lieutenant of Bonnelly's, is capably handled by Richard Thompson, while Jim Peters, the revenue officer, gives Mr. Artie Wilson, the efficient clerk in the Adams Express office, an opportunity for some fine work as an arm of the law used by Uncle Sam to suppress moonshiners.

BOSTONIA CONCERT.

Over 400 seats are already sold for the big concert by the Bostonia Ladies' Orchestra in Taylor Hall tomorrow night, Dec. 3. The prospects are that not a seat will be left. Surely if ever Taylor Hall should be crowded it is for this magnificent company which the Y. M. C. A. is bringing to the city at so great an expense.

All who expect to attend should reserve their seats at once. Any seat in the house for 50 cents.

To improve the appetite and strengthen the digestion, try a few doses of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. Mr. J. H. Seitz, of Detroit, Mich., says: "They restored my appetite when impaired, relieved me of a bloated feeling and caused a pleasant and satisfactory movement of the bowels." There are people in this community who need just such a medicine. For sale by all druggists. Every box warranted.

Cottage Prayer-Meeting

Seven cottage prayer meetings under direction of the Fourth Street Church of Christ, will be held tonight in the following homes:

A Battle For Life

Thrilling Experience of an African Trader on Nyanza River.

Traveling by Night, His Boat Was Attacked and Sunk by Hippopotamuses—A Marvellous Escape.

David Woodhouse, for many years a trader in Africa, on one occasion while roving up the Nyanza river at night ran into a herd of hippopotamuses that attacked and sunk his boat. Mr. Woodhouse himself tells the story of his awful experience and his marvelous escape from death.

"At the time of my narrative I was a trader in an out of the way place some twenty-four hours' journey up the Nyanza river on the southwest coast of Africa. Mongo Nyanza, as my station was called, was surrounded by dense and impenetrable forests extending for hundreds of miles inland and infested with wild beasts of every description.

"After an attack of malarial fever, which laid me low for some days, I was invited to the depot on the coast to pass a period of convalescence. A month by the sea brought me round in good shape, and I made preparations for a return journey.

"To avoid the excessive heat of day travel and to enable my Kroomen to do better work with their paddles I decided to start up the river at sundown.

"The noise made by the splashing paddles as the men plunged them into the water, accompanied by a dismal kind of chant, soon had their effect, and ere long sleep took possession of me. How long I had been in slumberland I do not know, but I was brought to my senses in a very forcible manner by the terrific shaking and crashing of the boat. My first impression was that the headman, through carelessness, had fouled some obstruction in the shape of a sunken tree or snag, a common occurrence when traveling at night. However, I had not long to wait before finding out the cause of the interruption, and this time there was no mistaking the awful nature of our predicament. Crash, crash! Again and again terrific blows assailed our craft, and in the misty half darkness I saw to my horror that we were in the very midst of a shoal of hippopotamuses! The crashes I had heard were the blows struck by the infuriated animals at the boat!

"Like a flash there came to my mind the recollection of a terrible affair that had happened only a short time before. A party of three officers from H. M. S. Flirt, who were in the care of the representative of an English trading house at Myumba, a place thirty miles south of Nyanza, had gone up the lagoon in a whaleboat for a day's hippopotamus shooting. Their expedition met with a shocking ending, for after wounding one of the beasts their boat was attacked and upset, and out of the four Englishmen in her only one survived to tell the story. Strange to say, he was the commander of the gunboat, the only one of the party who could not swim. He saved his life by climbing on the boat as she floated on the water bottom upward after being capsized by the angry hippopotamuses.

"Presently, after a particularly violent crash, I discovered that the side of the boat had been stove in and that it was leaking so badly that we could not possibly remain afloat many minutes longer. To make matters worse, I had been sleeping under a mosquito net, and in my eagerness to get up when the first crash came I had somehow become entangled in its folds. I could already feel my feet in the rising water, and the seriousness of the situation dawned upon me at once, for it appeared as if I should go down helplessly with the sinking boat through my inability to extricate myself from the clinging net.

"At last I managed to get clear, and then I saw that the boat was doomed. So far as I could see we were completely surrounded by hippopotamuses. First at our bow and then at the stern the monsters would rise, striking the craft viciously with such force that we could scarcely keep our balance. Presently the gunwale of the boat was level with the water. I was weak from recent illness and unable to swim a stroke, and my position seemed desperate. Shallow water was at least fifty yards away, and even supposing that I could have got one of my crew to consent to assist me ashore, that circle of ferocious beasts had to be faced.

"As the boat finally disappeared beneath the water one and all on board made a plunge clear of her in a desperate effort to reach the shore. Luckily, as she sank I was able to grasp hold of the headman. Then began what appeared to me a life and death struggle, he vainly trying to rid himself of his unwelcome burden, while I impressed upon him in jerky sentences that he was to convey me ashore, as he could swim well and I could not. If there should be any dying to do, I said, we would both undertake that journey together, for I was determined to stick to him.

"Finding that I was not to be disposed of easily, the man eventually struck out for the shore.

"We expected each moment to be our last. The plunging monsters first appeared at our front, menacing and terrible, and then disappeared, only to rise again at our rear almost within touch of us, blowing the water over us in clouds. The roaring of the angry brutes as they churned the water into foam and the terror stricken cries of the men as they endeavored to struggle through the deadly barrier of furious monsters added to the horrors of a scene which will never be effaced from my memory. The agony of mind I endured during the seemingly interminable space of time occupied by our progress shoreward was appalling, and to this day I do not know how we finally managed to elude the hippopotamuses and reach shallow water. There, more dead than alive, we crawled into the long grass, in which we hid, with the water almost touching our chins.

To add to our discomfort, if that were possible, we were tormented for the remainder of that awful night by thousands of voracious mosquitoes, which made war upon us until dawn appeared.

"With the advent of daylight we were able to take in our situation and after scrambling and crawling through dense bush eventually reached terra firma safely. Fortunately no one was missing, but what a miserable crew we looked! All that we possessed had sunk with the boat. I was perhaps the worst equipped of them all. I was in my suit of pajamas, just as I had emerged from under the mosquito net, and hatless and bootless, a nice costume in which to face a journey on foot through bush and swamp to the coast or the nearest village, if such could be found.

"To remain where we were and wait for the passing of a canoe or boat was out of the question altogether, for it might have been days before such an event occurred. We therefore decided to push on through the bush. This we found a most difficult undertaking. The undergrowth was so thick that progress was very slow, and it was only after many hours of hard work, during which my garments suffered considerably, that we struck a track which eventually landed us in a native village on the banks of a creek, a tributary of the Nyanza river, we discovered later.

"Here we were met by the chief, who seemed annoyed at the unceremonious manner in which we had invaded his domain. However, after a satisfactory explanation on our part, assuring him that we only desired his hospitality and assistance and that we were hungry and required food, he provided for our consumption the head of a bush deer, together with some native roots called cassava.

"The loan of a canoe large enough for myself and two men was readily offered, and after considerable haggling over the extortionate price asked for the hire of the craft a bargain was arrived at and I proceeded down the creek, leaving part of my men behind, and eventually reached Nyanza."

MANY IMPROVEMENTS

Being Made by the C. B. L. & N. Traction Company,
Chief of Which is Large Car Barn, Repair
Tracks and Shops, in Newark.

There are few people in Newark who realize the extent of the improvement made by the Columbus, Buckeye Lake and Newark, and Newark and Granville electric railroads in the erection of the large new car barn and repair tracks and shops, west of Locust street, and north of the Church street extension.

The new barn is a substantial brick structure, 125 feet by 250 feet, built after the most approved plans and specifications for this class of work, made by Architect Kitfield of Boston, Mass. The building is covered with a heavy galvanized iron roof, supported on heavy steel girders, making the building practically fire proof, with the exception of several wooden floors and partitions.

The entire structure was put up by Contractor P. S. Phillips of Newark, at a contract price of $60,000 for the building alone, while the permanent equipment such as machinery, tracks, and furniture cost tens of thousands of dollars in addition. The building was built in the usual careful and capable manner characteristic of Mr. Phillips and when completed was in every detail in accordance with the plans of the architect and ready to be accepted by the company.

The building may for the purpose of description be divided into three sections, the lines of division running with the building, from north to south into the eastern section, middle section and western section.

In the east wing are located offices, trainmen's room, store room, and sub-station; the middle section is a car barn for storage of cars, and repair work, while the western section is a storage room for machine shop equipment.

The building fronts on Church street, and not the least handsome of the simple decorative effects which are noticeable is a large time dial, on which is marked the correct time, kept by a big clock tightly boxed up on the interior wall.

The eastern section will be described in detail first. In front is the large, well ventilated, and thoroughly equipped office of F. L. Mowry, superintendent of the Newark and Granville electric railway. The main office has desks arranged for Mr. Mowry and assistants while opening from this is a smaller private office. Of easy access is clothes closets, toilet rooms, and a closet for the superintendent's private belongings.

In the rear of this office and extending back to the distance of probably a hundred feet, is the trainmen's waiting room. Here the relief crews wait, and the men report for duty and receive any general instructions. While not on the line, but waiting to go on duty this is the men's home and every convenience is provided for them. There are tables where conductors may sit while writing reports or checking up their day's work, benches where the men may lounge and rest as well as other necessary furniture. There are also 74 of the latest improved lockers, ventilated at top and bottom, each man having the use of one in which he may put his belongings and know they are safe. Wash room, toilet rooms and every other necessary adjunct to the comfort and convenience of the men is in evidence.

Just to the west of the trainmen's room is the office of A. M. Frazee, superintendent of motive power of the C. B. L. & N. company. Here again one finds the same thoroughness of general equipment and scrupulous attention to every necessary detail that is noticeable elsewhere, and makes Mr. Frazee's office a model for the use to which it is put.

To the rear or north of the trainmen's room is the boiler room, where is located the large, low-pressure boiler that furnishes heat for the entire building, natural gas being the fuel used. The boiler is set on a brick foundation the floor of the room being of brick and on a level with the cellar. Just in the rear of the boiler room is the store room, where supplies are kept, and issued upon requisition to trainmen or other employees by the store keeper, an account being rendered of every thing issued, even to a piece of waste.

The store keeper at present is Mr. Luther Madden, who also has charge of the sub-station, in the room adjoining on the north. In this sub-station two 500 Kilowatt rotary converters, and two 350 Kilowatt three phase transformers. This is the most expensive equipment in the entire building, and is the acme of perfection in the construction of electrical machinery. In this room, and by the machinery mentioned the alternating 2200 volt current from Hebron is changed to a low pressure direct current which can be applied to the needs of the road. There are now four of these sub-stations, three being in use at present, one each at Hibernia, east of Columbus, at the Hebron power house and Newark. The fourth at Pleasant Valley will be put in use on the Newark and Zanesville road and is now ready to have the current turned in which can be done as soon as the transmitter lines are completed at Newark.

We now come to the second or middle section. Here five tracks enter and run about half way back, two of them going clear back to the north end of the building. A partition about midway divides this section into two parts, the front or south half being used for a storage barn, the rear or north half a repair shop.

On the five tracks in the front part cars are stored and while standing here any slight repairs may be made, as there are pits under each track for its full length. The floors of these pits are of cement, and run entirely under this section. Here the cars are washed, the lower or cement floor sloping toward a center drain, the waste water being carried away.

This section is heated, so that cars running in here have the snow and ice melted away and the equipment dried out.

The repair shop in the north half of this middle section is in charge of Daniel Scanlon. Every facility is at hand to do any kind of repair work in the most efficient manner, and in the least possible space of time. A car can be run back here on one of the two repair tracks, compressed air jacks run under it and the trucks taken from under it. These trucks can then be moved to another part of the room, and the motors lifted out by a traveling electric crane, and placed wherever workmen desire. The two 15-inch compressed jacks are the newest and most powerful of the kind manufactured.

The western section is a storage barn and here are stored all cars not in immediate use, and also those coming in from their last runs, until they are put in service again. There are five tracks in this section. Partitioned at in the rear is a machine shop in which there is a turning lathe 36 inches by 16 feet, weighing 17,000 pounds and other approved machinery.

The total trackage in the barns is 1100 feet, giving a capacity of about 60 cars.

About Friday, it is expected, that all the equipment of the Buckeye road will be housed in the Newark barn, in addition to that of the Newark and Granville and Newark roads now there. Here also will be located the office of F. A. Goutelle, the C. B. L. and N. superintendent of transportation, of the C. B. L. & N. train dispatcher's office.

In the latter office it is expected to establish a private telephone exchange and switchboard connecting with all points along the line.

Johnstown Electric.

The party of surveyors who are laying out the extension of the Columbus, New Albany and Johnstown line reached Johnstown Tuesday. Practically no opposition has been encountered.

When the road is completed, the distance from Columbus to Johnstown will be reduced from about 60 miles, the present mileage by steam road, to about 27 miles by trolley.

DELIGHTFUL RECEPTION IN PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

Budget of Local Happenings and the Going and Coming of People in College Town.

Granville, Ohio, Dec. 2.—A most delightful reception was given in the parlors of the Presbyterian church on Tuesday evening by the pastor, Rev. C. L. Work and the elders of the church, to the members of the church and congregation. The affair was a great success, and a large number of people were present. Refreshments were served, and a fine social time was had by those present. The reception will have the effect of bringing the members of the church into closer relation with each other, as well as in resulting in much good other ways.

Wallace Tuttle left Tuesday for a short visit with friends in Springfield. Miss Blanche Horton of Zanesville, spent Thanksgiving here with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Horton.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Durham visited relatives in Zanesville several days.

THE RAILWAYS

As Scarce as Men's Teeth.

During 1934 free transportation over the western railroads will be as scarce as men's teeth. The official pass agreement of these lines has been sent to all officials of the western roads under private cover. The following is the gist of the compact: No annual passes will be extended beyond December 31. The intent of the agreement is the prohibition of the issuance of free transportation.

Railway Notes.

After having been off duty for several weeks on account of injuries, Machinist James E. Poe has returned to work.

W. F. Boggs has severed his connection with the B. & O. machine shop where he has served in the capacity of foreman for some time. He goes to Columbus to take a position with the Columbus, Buckeye Lake and Newark Traction company.

Edward Davison, one of the efficient and accommodating clerks in the B. & O. round house office at this point, had an experience that he will not soon forget, nor will he ever let it happen again if he has anything to say about it. Ed has lately had two new desk phones installed in his office, and the other morning he incautiously took hold of the receivers of both phones at once. While he had the receivers in his hands some one rang up the office on one of the phones, and then it was that Ed went through more agonies than a trained circus performer.

The boys in the office thought he had gone deaf until the matter was explained. Although badly shocked Ed still survives to tell of his experience.

RHEUMATISM

AN INDESCRIBABLE TORTURE

Because Rheumatism sometimes comes on suddenly it doesn't prove that it is a chance disease or one due to accidental causes. It takes time for it to develop, and is at work in the system long before any symptoms are felt. The blood is the first point of attack, and the poisonous acids that cause the aches and pains are then distributed through the circulation to different parts of the system, and settle in joints, muscles and nerves; and when the system is in this condition it needs only some exciting cause like exposure to night air, damp, chilly weather, or the cold, bleak winds of winter, to arouse the slumbering poisons and bring on Rheumatism. The severity of the attack depends upon the amount of acid in the blood and the quantity of acrid matter in the joints and muscles. Some people are almost helpless from the first, while others have occasional spells or are uncomfortable, restless, nervous and half sick all the time from the nagging aches and pains. Rheumatism is a disagreeable companion even in its mildest form. It grows worse as we grow older, and frequently stiffens the joints, draws the muscles out of shape and breaks down the nervous system. A disease that originates in the blood, as Rheumatism does, cannot be cured with external remedies like liniments and plasters; such things scatter the pains or drive them to some other part of the body, but do not touch the disease or improve the condition of the blood. The thin acid blood must be restored to its normal purity and strength, so that all poisonous substances may be carried out of the system, and no medicine accomplishes this in so short a time as S.S.S., which not only neutralizes the acids and counteracts the poisons, but builds up the general health at the same time.

An Old Man's Story

[Original.]

My grandfather, aged ninety, has often told me this story:

"When I was a young man there were two ways of carrying money—one in a knif purse with rings, the other in a money belt. One autumn I was traveling in the west for the purpose of buying grain, and had with me a lot of gold. You see, in those days the currency wasn't worth much. If you went into a store to buy anything and plunked down a ten dollar bill the first thing the shopkeeper did was to pick up a magnifying glass to see if it wasn't counterfeit. The next thing was to take out a Bank Note Reporter and turn over the leaves to get at the standing of the bank issuing the bill. Then, like as not, he would hand your bill back to you, telling you that he hadn't any change. That's the reason I traveled with gold.

"Well, one day I was riding along a road when a man overtook me and got into conversation. He asked me if I could give him change for a two dollar bill, and I took my purse from my pocket, slipped one of the rings aside, drew out four Mexican quarters, a five franc piece, worth 95 cents, and a half dime. The Mexican and French coins were common in those days, and what I gave him was equivalent to $2.

"You carry your money in a purse," said he. "Why don't you use a money belt? They're safer."

"They're so safe that every thief goes for them the first thing he does. We may as well use the purse. It's handier, and if a robber wants your money he'll get it anyway."

"I prefer the money belt," he added, then began to talk of something else.

"At nightfall we stopped at a tavern. It was a dilapidated place, half the shutters gone and the porch rotted away. I didn't like the looks of the place, and the landlord was as rascally looking a man as ever I set eyes on. The room he put me in was in keeping with the rest. The plaster was half down from the ceiling and the lock on the door was broken. I hung up my trousers, with the purse in one of the pockets, on the bed post, then pulled the coverlet up to my chin, and thought I would go to sleep. I don't know—up over me and went to sleep."

"In the middle of the night I awoke with the idea that there was some one in the room. At first I thought it might be imaginary and had come from a dream of the man who had taken an interest in where I kept my money, for I had gone to sleep thinking of him, but I heard a board in the floor creak and made up my mind that some one was really moving about. However, I valued my life more than my money and lay perfectly still. There in the gloom I saw something white come toward the bed—it stood within a yard of me. I showed no sign of being awake, and presently an arm was thrust out, a hand fumbled for the pocket of my trousers, was withdrawn, and I knew my purse had gone with it. I listened till I heard a faint sound which I knew was the closing of the door, then, turning over, I went to sleep."

My grandfather, as I have said, told me this story a great many times, though he didn't remember ever having told it all, and I knew that at this point he expected me to express surprise that he could take the loss of his purse so coolly.

"Grandfather," I said, "how could you go to sleep so easily?"

"Well, my boy, I had escaped with my life, and that made me feel very comfortable."

"Go on, grandfather."

"The next morning I rose early, made some inquiries about my comrade of the day before, but when the landlord told me he had gone at daylight I didn't manifest any surprise or disappointment. I feared he might be in league with the man and make some excuse to detain me. Fortunately I had the ten dollar bill the thief had given me with which to pay him for my keeping, and he took it so readily, without examining it, that I knew he was glad to get rid of me, thinking that I had not discovered my loss in his house. He gave me in change the five franc piece and two of the quarters I had given the thief, and I rode off, feeling glad to get away from such a villainous place.

"Instead of traveling straight along the road to the then village of Chicago, as would be expected, I turned northward at the first road I came to and that night reached a point where St. Joseph, Mich., now stands. A sloop went to Chicago twice a week, and in a couple of days I crossed the lake and reached port without accident. There I bought my grain."

My grandfather paused, and I knew that he had arrived at another point for a question.

"But, grandfather, where did you get money to buy grain with? I thought the thief had taken your purse."

"So he did, boy; so he did, but he didn't get any money. You see, having to travel that way, every fall I was used to filling my purse with shot covered with a few dollars in silver and kept my gold in a money bag strapped across one shoulder and under the other. That's the reason why I was so free in drawing my purse before the stranger."

Then I would make my customary observation, "Why, grandfather, what a sly dog you must have been when you were a young man."

Grandfather would chuckle and the next week would tell me the story again. ARTHUR V. SAWYER.

The New Patient

She was not really a patient the day she came, but she was the next day, when she fell out of Miriam's cot and broke her neck. The nurse found her there and Miriam leaning over the edge of the cot crying great round tears down on to her. Everything is hard to bear when one is ill.

"Bless me!" cried the nurse, but she ought to have said, "Bless you!" for Miriam said the nurse was always blessing people. "Bless me, what is this that's happened while I've been away?"

"She f-fell out an' b-broke herself!" sobbed Miriam. Then she caught sight of the nurse's face, and it was smiling.

"Why, that's all right!" she cried cheerily. "Now she's a real patient, don't you see? Not just a visitor. And I shall look her in with you and nurse her. Oh, yes, I know some medicine that will cure her. I know where there's a bottle of it."

"But she's b-broken," Miriam said, although she was not crying now, and she was almost smiling.

"Yes, I know, poor thing! She will have to have her neck set, of course, and then the medicine put on it, and then the nursing. You can help me a good deal about that."

That was how the Princess Gloria came to be a real patient in Ward E. The nurse said she was twice a patient—first, because she needed curing, and, second, because she was so patient. She never complained at all, though I leave it to you if a broken neck isn't a pretty bad thing to have. But all day long the little Princess Gloria lay on Miriam's arm, bearing her troubles with a sweet, unchanging smile.

"She's a very patient, isn't she?" the next cot girl said once. "I believe—I believe I could be if I had her on my arm. I think I'd like to catch it of her."

Perhaps it was a hint, but Miriam did not take it. The Princess Gloria was here—her very own—and of course she belonged on her arm, did she not? Had not mamma brought her in her mud-lathering day a-purpose to help her have a broken arm and three ribs? When you had a broken arm and three ribs in your side you needed something to help you have them.

The next cot girl was very sick, the beautiful nurse said, and no one came to see her on visiting days. The night after the hint, it was a hint, Miriam heard her whispering to herself. The lights were turned low, and "was very quiet in Ward E."

"Dear, so right to sleep," the next cot girl was whispering. "Does your neck ache awfully? Don't you lie comfortable on my arm? Hush, dear. Go to sleep."

What in the world? Miriam lifted her head a little and peeped across at the next cot. Then suddenly she understood.

"She's makin' b-bieve a Princess Gloria on her arm," Miriam thought, with a little choke in her throat. "Oh, I wish the beautiful nurse would come! If I hadn't any ribs in my side I could do it."

She waited with what patience she could. Very soon she knew the light step would be heard in the corridor and the nurse would be beside her bed. Would she not be surprised?

A little later the nurse had come and gone, and still the next cot girl was whispering softly, but this time it was to the real little Princess Gloria on her arm, and Miriam went to sleep smiling—Eleanor Woodbridge in Youth's Companion.

THE A. A. Griggs COMPANY

R. R. HOOPER

FORMER LICKING COUNTY MAN DIES AT COLUMBUS.

Father of Osman C. Hooper of the Columbus Dispatch Editorial Staff Passes Away.

Columbus, O., Dec. 2.—After an illness of three weeks, Richard R. Hooper died Tuesday at his residence, 1292 Mt. Vernon avenue, where he has lived for a third of a century. Mr. Hooper had been an invalid for a number of years, but while he had not engaged in any active pursuit, he had been able to attend to the ordinary affairs about the home and to visit with his children and friends and out of the city. The immediate cause of his death was dilation of the heart, resulting from over-exertion in one of his home tasks.

Mr. Hooper is survived by his wife and three children: Osman C. Hooper, of the editorial staff of the Dispatch, and Mrs. Charles L. Doile of this city, and Mrs. H. C. McNeil of Upper Alton, Ill., all of whom had been present and ministering to him up to the time of his death.

Mr. and Mrs. Hooper moved to this city from Central College, O., in 1863, and located on what was then the Johnstown pike, now Mt. Vernon avenue at the corner of Champion, and there they have lived till now, watching and aiding in the development of the city.

In 1870 Mr. Hooper established a Sunday school on Twentieth street at what was then the Mt. Airy school house and with others, notably the late Mrs. Abel Hildreth and the late Mrs. William Field, conducted it as a mission of the First Baptist church. From this beginning came what is now the Hildreth Baptist church. Both there and at Eastwood church, and the various religious efforts of the vicinity Mr. Hooper has been more or less prominently identified. This work was his delight, and he died, thanking God for the many blessings of home and love of religious work.

Mr. Hooper was born at Hatherleigh, Devonshire, England, May 28, 1827. He came to this country in 1850, traveled as a colporteur in Connecticut and Ohio for a few months, attended school at Granville college and settled at Alexandria, Ohio, where he was merchant and postmaster. There he married Sarah Celestia Castle, who died in 1864, leaving a son, Osman C. Hooper. Later Mr. Hooper married Louisa Hildreth, who survives him. To them five children were born, two of whom are still living.

The funeral services will be held at Hildreth Baptist church, Twentieth street, Thursday morning at 10 o'clock.

SIXTEEN TYROS

WERE TAKEN OVER THE HOT DESERT SANDS

At Kotah Temple Tuesday Evening—D. O. K. K. Street Parade Followed by Degree Work.

The meeting of the D. O. K. K.'s at Kotah Temple, No. 101, Tuesday evening, was a decided success. The tyros were numerous, the desert sands were hot and the Arabs led the tyros through the wilderness like the trained guides they are.

A magnificent street parade was given before the degree work was begun. The parade was headed by the Buckeye band and the famous Kotah elephant, after which came the Arabs and trembling tyros.

Sixteen candidates were taken into the mysteries of the order, being from Shawnee, Johnstown, Utica and Newark. About thirty Arabs were present from Shawnee, ten from Utica and eight from Johnstown. M. A. Bridge, of Columbus, past grand chancellor of the K. of P. order of the state, and C. A. Poland, of Mt. Vernon, Imperial trustee of the D. O. K. K.'s were guests of honor.

A feature that was particularly enjoyable was the singing of the Shawnee quartet. Those who have witnessed the team work of other lodges in Ohio are unanimous in saying that the work of Tuesday night was superior to any.

The initiatory work was followed by a banquet. C. L. H. Long presiding as toastmaster. Several excellent addresses were delivered.

Most Artistic Dining Room in Chicago Is the Pride of Mrs. Warren Springer, Formerly Miss Maggie Maginnis of Newark.

The Chicago Examiner of November 14 has an exhaustive description of the dining room of Mrs. Warren Springer of that city, in their beautiful home on Rush street, which is pronounced to be the most artistic in Chicago.

Mrs. Springer was a former resident of Newark where she was known and is remembered as Maggie McGinnis. The article says in part:

"In this room is by far the finest collection of antique china, pewter, copper and furniture in Chicago, and there are few equal to it in the United States. And the charm of it is that the quaint old things have come down from Mrs. Springer's ancestors. She is state regent of the Daughters of the Revolution, is eligible to membership in the D. A. R., Colonial Dames, Descendants of the Mayflower, and every other exclusive ancestral society in existence while Mr. Springer's family tree takes root back in the middle ages.

"When one enters this room he is in doubt where first to cast his admiring eyes. After showing the visitor the homespun table cloths and napkins which belonged to her great grandmother, Mrs. Springer next exhibits her collection of pewter. There is an immense platter, tankards and dozens of plates or rare design, and innumerable candle sticks. All this splendor is exhibited on mahogany table, and Mrs. Springer has a charming fashion of piling the immense platter high with apples in the fall of the year, after filling the tankards with cider, and thus entertaining her friends in genuine New England style.

"It is the priceless china contained in this room, however, that most attracts connoisseurs. An old-fashioned cabinet is crowded with willow ware and other old wares, worth their weight in gold, all heirlooms from Mrs. Springer's great grandmother. Ranged on a shelf around the room are cups and saucers of every variety of china known, among them being three pieces of early Delft, for which Mrs. Springer paid $1500.

"A collection of copper bowls and earthen ware pottery, ranged on a mantel draped with a homespun blanket completes a room which is the envy of every one who enters it.

"Mrs. Springer owns a bed and sleeps in it every night, upon which George Washington once slept, at the home of Mrs. Springer's great grandmother in Pennsylvania, where General Washington was once entertained. It is a four poster affair, and she has to get into it by means of a small flight of steps.

"Mrs. Springer's pet antiquity is absent, however, and thereby hangs a tale. It was a spinet belonging to her great grandmother, and was mentioned upon its arrival in this country by the Lancaster Gazette of that far off time.

"Mr. Springer is a clever musician and his fastidious ear was shocked by the discords produced, and he gave it to the janitor. When Mrs. Springer heard of this she hunted up the janitor and was informed by that worthy that it had been split up and made into a table."

Eczema, scald head, hives, itching of the skin of any sort, instantly relieved, permanently cured. Doan's Ointment. At any drug store.

Women Depositors.

Women as a rule are better savers than men—they have a knack of making a dollar go just about twice as far as a man can. Many men who cannot save anything themselves, very wisely make their wives the family treasurer and upon them devolves the responsibility of putting by something for a rainy day.

The Licking Co. Bank Co.

Welcomes the accounts of women, and its officials and clerks are always ready to give them any advice or assistance they may require in the opening of an account or drawing money.

Very few people care to have others know of their affairs; we therefore guard all accounts carefully and consider all business as "strictly confidential."

LADIES, have you seen our modern rest room Everything for your convenience. When down town shopping, drop in and see us.

WAR LECTURE

"In and Out of Andersonville," at Taylor Hall on Next Monday Evening.

Next Monday evening, December 7, Frank W. Smith of Belletue, O., will deliver his great war lecture, "In and Out of Andersonville," in Taylor Hall, Y. M. C. A. This lecture is received with great enthusiasm wherever heard. It is a thrilling description of a war experience. It will be well worth any one's while to come out and hear him. Mr. Smith illustrates his lecture with a number of magnificent paintings which he brings with him.

The popular prices will hold for this lecture, adults 15 cents, children 10. Sunday afternoon Mr. Smith speaks at the Men's Meeting in Taylor Hall on the subject, "True Blue, or Under Fire for God."

A glass or two of water taken half an hour before breakfast will usually keep the bowels regular. Harsh cathartics should be avoided. When a purgative is needed, take Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. They are mild and gentle in their action. For sale by all druggists.
